What You Need to Know About Your Lashes

How long will my lash extensions last?

This depends on a couple of things: your natural eyelash growth cycle and how well you take care of them. Eyelash growth cycle varies from person to person; it is affected by genetics, and also by other external factors.

What is an eyelash growth cycle?

It consists of three phases: the growth phase (hair actively grows), the resting phase (growth stops), and the shedding phase (as a new hair grows from the follicle, the old hair will shed). Every eyelash is on its own cycle so you do not have to worry about all of them falling out at once. Growth cycles can last anywhere from 30 to 100 days.

What if I pull an eyelash out, will it grow back?

Yes, eyelashes will regrow, but it can take up to two months to fully replace the eyelash depending on where it was in the growth cycle. Be careful, because if you lose a clump of them, each one will take a different amount of time.

Our eyelash extensions are being glued to your natural eyelash. Each natural eyelash has to be a certain length in order for us to adhere an extension to it (which can be in the middle of your growth stage). Your natural eyelash will only last so many days before it falls out. For these reasons you cannot compare how long your eyelash extensions will last to your friends' extensions. If we skip an eyelash at a touch-up appointment, it is simply that the hair isn't long enough (or you may need a longer appointment time).

How do I take care of them?

- Do NOT get them wet for 24 hours after every iLash appointment.
- Do NOT steam your face.
- Do NOT get oil near them- oil will dissolve the adhesive and you will lose your extensions prematurely.
- Do NOT rub eyes or eyelashes.
- Do NOT pull or twist eyelashes.
- Do NOT get acidic peels; they will dissolve the bonding agent in the adhesive.
- Do NOT sleep on them.
- Do NOT comb them from the root- just the tips.
- Do NOT try to make them "straight"-the extensions are glued to your natural hairs and not everyone's eyelash hairs even grow straight. The extension is just that: an extension of your natural hair. If the hair is growing towards the left, the extension will go that way as well.
- Do NOT play with them, and do not touch them with your fingers.
- DO only use water based (oil free) makeup remover.
- DO be gentle when cleansing the eye area.
- DO take off eye makeup off every night. If you have oily skin, take the eye makeup remover, and use on upper lids and below your eyes before you go to sleep (as well as after exercising)
